Risky Business and iLinc Web Conferencing

Web conferencing is a technology that allows people to communicate more effectively over the Internet. A virtual environment allows you to display PowerPoint slides and other files, share documents, and interact with participants much as you would in an in-person training or meeting. The Northwest Portland Area Indian Health Board uses the iLinc web conferencing service through the Northwest Center for Public Health Practice for trainings and meetings and will be offering this service as part of the upcoming Risky Business Training.

Computer Requirements

- PC (Mac users can use iLinc only if they're running Virtual PC software)
- Internet connection (56K phone modem or faster)
- Web browser (Internet Explorer and Mozilla Firefox always work, other browsers may work)

Audio Requirements

The audio portion of our iLinc sessions will most often be conducted via teleconferencing. You need a telephone near your computer. Please use a phone with a Mute button to help keep background noise low during the conference call. A telephone headset, or a speaker phone, will make it easier for you to participate in the training. iLinc also supports Voice over Internet Protocol (VoIP). To use this technology, users need a microphone and speaker or a computer headset.

If participating as a Group in a Common Room you will need:

- Computer connected to the Internet (same requirements as above)
- A projector connected to the computer
- A speaker phone with a Mute button
