

Storytellers Of Health: Resilience in Action

Abigail Echo-Hawk

EQUALITY

EQUITY

EQUITY

Research calls them human subjects.

I call them Storytellers Of Health.

Why are stories important?

What is our responsibility to the story?

What is our responsibility to the storyteller?

Build trust

Learn from each other

Respect and incorporate traditional knowledge

Sustainability

Cultural Rigor

A circular diagram illustrating the components of Cultural Rigor. At the center is a stylized sun with the text "Cultural Rigor" inside. Surrounding the center are four quadrants, each containing a stylized figure holding hands with the others. The quadrants are labeled: "Build trust" (top-left, red), "Learn from each other" (top-right, blue), "Respect and incorporate traditional knowledge" (bottom-left, blue), and "Sustainability" (bottom-right, orange). The entire diagram is set against a light green background with a circular arrow-like shape.

- Lead the change
- Honor the story
- Build with cultural RIGOR

EQUITY

Urban Indian Health Institute

A Division of the Seattle Indian Health Board

611 12th Avenue South, Seattle, WA 98144
Phone: (206) 812-3030 Fax: (206) 812-3044
Email: info@uihi.org Website: www.uihi.org